

DON'T CHANGE THE CONSTITUTION, SAYS JUDGE McREYNOLDS

It is "The Foundation of Our Government and We Must Abide By It"

"ENFORCE PRINCIPLES"

Associate Justice of Supreme Court Just Back From England

BEVERLY, Mass., Aug. 6—(INS)—"Changing the Constitution is not sound government," James Clark McReynolds, associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, said today in a copyrighted interview with the Beverly Evening Times.

The justice said that the Constitution is "the foundation of our government and we must abide by it."

"Enforcement of its principles is necessary for recovery," he said. "The Constitution has carried us along through 148 years and now, with unrest prevalent throughout the world, is no time to make a change."

The so-called Democratic "Old Dealer" quoted Abraham Lincoln as saying: "The middle of the stream is a poor place to swap horses."

Justice McReynolds, just returned from a visit to England, is the guest of Mrs. Joseph Leander Looze at her cottage, "Sea Rocks," in neighboring Gloucester on Cape Ann. He discussed the gold cases, how the people were looking up in England, politics and the youth of today among other things in the remarkable interview.

Seated on the sun porch of the Looze cottage, Justice McReynolds answered questions put by the Times reporter.

When asked about the gold cases, Justice McReynolds said he believed the act involved clearly took the property of the holders of railroad gold bonds without "adequate payment."

"The majority of the court," said the justice, "seemed to hold that the Constitution of June 5 did not affect the gold clause in bonds to the United States. Nevertheless, we are told that no damage resulted to the holders now before us through refusal to pay one of them in gold coin of the kind designated or its equivalent. That amounted to a declaration that the government can give with one hand and take away with the other. The default was thus made easy and safe."

Justice McReynolds in discussing the qualifications needed by a youth desiring to enter politics for a career said that he was never connected with politics to a great extent. He said:

"Brain and character are needed in politics among the young and old. Any man who cannot abide by his promises should have no place in politics."

Of the youth today he said: "Most of the present-day college graduates have the wrong slant. They expect to begin at the top. With exceptions, one must begin at the bottom and work up. A foundation is needed today when as many graduates from college as did from high school years ago."

The justice, who has just returned from England, stated he was deeply impressed by the confidence of the people in that country.

"In Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin," he said, "they seem to realize they have a leader of experience and sound judgment. And it is remarkable the confidence they have in him. Two years ago when I went to London the people were down-hearted."

He said he did not tour Great Britain and could not give a first-hand report on business conditions there. He added, however, that the silver jubilee of the King and Queen was a great event and seemed to act as a stimulant in giving the people confidence.

Since coming to Gloucester, Justice McReynolds has had numerous visitors among whom was Colonel Edward M. House, former advisor to the late President Woodrow Wilson, and now a summer resident of Manchester-by-the-Sea. The justice said that he was "deeply indebted" to Colonel House as the man who brought him to the attention of President Wilson and urged his appointment to the Supreme Court. The justice spoke highly of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes with whom he served for several years on the Federal Supreme Court Bench.

Justice McReynolds, a native of Elkton, Ky., but now a resident of Washington, Nashville, Tenn., and New York, is a Democrat appointed in 1914 by President Wilson, and is of the so-called "conservative bloc" in the Supreme Court. He is a so-called "old dealer" of the type of United States Senator Carter Glass (D.) of Virginia.

The justice delivered the minority opinion of the Supreme Court in the recent gold cases and said he is "set" on his convictions on gold—and has been since he split over the issue with William Jennings Bryan back in 1896.

Justice McReynolds was resting and overlooking the Atlantic when found by the Times reporter. He will return to Washington, where the Supreme Court sits again in October.

RHODE ISLAND ROUTS DEMOCRATS IN ELECTION

Give New Dealers A Crushing Defeat in Election Contest

WAS A BITTER FIGHT

(By International News Service)

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 7—Democratic Rhode Island swapped horses in mid-stream today, and in a crushing defeat for the New Deal administration proponents, sent a Republican to Congress by a plurality of more than 11,000 votes.

Charles F. Risk, G.O.P. candidate for Congress in the first Rhode Island district, was swept into office with more than an 11,000 plurality over Antonio Prince, Democrat, who predicated his campaign on the slogan "Go forward with Roosevelt."

At an early hour today 99 out of 112 districts gave Risk 41,273 votes against 30,142 for Prince.

Last Fall, Francis B. Condon, Democrat, was elected in this district by a plurality of 21,400.

Risk, a World War veteran, lawyer and former district court judge, was jubilant over the victory and termed it a complete repudiation of the New Deal by the people of Rhode Island. In his campaign speeches he made the processing tax his chief issue. This tax has resulted in closing many textile plants in the Blackstone Valley, long a Democratic stronghold. Prince evaded the issue of the processing tax, but the Democratic state organization, which controls every branch of the state government, waged a bitter fight in his behalf and was confident of winning.

WOMAN WANTS TO KNOW WHOSE AUTO HIT HER

Mrs. Anna May Verville Asks Courier to Aid in Finding Driver

HIT EARLY SATURDAY

"I'd like to know who hit me!" This plea is put forth by Mrs. Anna May Verville, West Bristol.

This resident of the Township asks that the motorist who struck her on Newport Road early last Saturday morning oblige by sending his or her name and address to Mrs. Verville.

Mrs. Verville says she has suffered much inconvenience and pain by the blows inflicted by the automobile.

Today she made the request to the Courier to aid in locating the driver of the car, and requesting that said driver help by revealing his identity, even though he did not take the trouble to halt after striking down a human being.

"I didn't see the car," stated Mrs. Verville. "My head must have struck the highway, and I guess I was knocked out. I didn't remember anything for a long time. Then a neighbor came along and took me home."

"Were you treated by a doctor?" Mrs. Verville was asked.

"No. My neighbor picked me up—I forget just what his name is—and brought me home. My ankle was sprained, and my muscles seem to be all pulled. But I would like to know who hit me."

Then she was asked if she is recovering from her injuries.

"Oh, yes, slowly. And if the person who struck me would let me know, I would be satisfied."

Then the suggestion was made by the Courier representative that a hit-and-run driver would without doubt be very reticent about forwarding his name and address.

"Well, maybe you're right. I guess if he wouldn't stop to help me, he wouldn't let me know who he was," agreed Mrs. Verville.

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 7—Miscellaneous business that was transacted in Court House row offices yesterday included the probation of three wills and other business in the Register's office, divorces started in the office of the Prothonotary and a petition in the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks County.

A libel in divorce has been started in the Court of Common Pleas in the case of Sallie Hellyer, New Hope, against Edwin V. Hellyer, of Wilkes-Barre, on grounds of desertion. They were married at Kintnersville in 1903.

In the matter of appropriation of lands for public parks, parkways, playgrounds, etc., in the borough of Sellersville, a petition for the appointment of viewers to assess damages, was filed, Judge Calvin S. Boyer immediately appointed Charles B. Ermentrout, Ulysses G. Loux and Alfred M. Wildman as viewers. The land in question is the property of the Lehigh Valley Transit Company and the parties concerned have been unable to reach an agreement as to damages to land to be taken by the borough of Sellersville for park purposes.

Beer Retailers Win

Philadelphia, Aug. 7—Retail beer distributors fighting "with their backs to the wall" against legislation that would sweep them out of business today had won a temporary injunction restraining Pennsylvania authorities from enforcing the new State beer law in Philadelphia.

Wilhelm F. Knauer, former counsel for the Liquor Control Board attacked the constitutionality of the law in behalf of four distributors and contended the legislation is defective in title. Judge Horace Stern, Common Pleas Court in granting the injunction pointed out he was not passing on the constitutionality of the measure, but merely preserving the status quo of the distributors pending action in Common Pleas Court No. 4 where the original Equity bill was filed. Under the new law retail distributors must pay a license fee of $400 instead of $150 and operation of any other type of business without express authority from the Liquor Control Board, is prohibited. The law also prohibits sale, by anyone except tap rooms, in less than case lots.

Ship Crews Quit

Paris, France, Aug. 7—Four thousand crew members walked off the gigantic Normandie, Champlain, Columbia and Lafayette, at Havre today, parading through the streets shouting and waving red flags as the scene of agitation against government pay cuts shifted from riotous Brest. It was announced the Champlain, with many Americans booked, will not be allowed to sail for New York this afternoon unless the 10% reductions ordered in the "Save the Franc" economic drive are restored immediately. With one dead, 150 in hospitals and many rioters in jail, Brest was calm today, but one thousand guards stayed on duty in the city guarding damaged shops and littered streets as a result of yesterday's scene.

THE QUINTUPLETS

The Dionne quintuplets are holding up extremely well as an attraction for sightseers.

The other day, their 16th-month birthday, while their nurse raised them briefly on high one at a time, they were viewed by 4,000 persons, eagerly pressing against a six-foot fence and uttering ecstatic "Ohs" and "Ahs" and "Isn't she cute!"

Four thousand visitors—half of them from the United States—would be a pretty good day's crowd for Niagara Falls, Mammoth Cave or the Grand Canyon. So the custodians of our great natural wonders this side of the border must recognize that in the quint of Callander, Ont., they have a rival of no mean order.

An invariable characteristic of infants, however, is that they alter and grow. Already at 16 months the quints are no longer quite the authentic little babies they were, and their magnetism for people avert of sight seeing, or poor in sights to see, will inevitably soon begin to weaken. The realization of this truth must occasionally affect their guardians with a sinking of the heart, and the promoters of more durable rival phenomena with a corresponding elation.

Still, the little town of Callander will have no grounds for complaint. Some communities are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. Callander, so to speak, had greatness born upon it. Few indeed are the communities which enjoy that good fortune even for a little while.

RACKETEER'S VICTIM

"There is today scarcely a business in New York which does not somehow pay its tribute to the underworld—a tribute levied by force and collected by fear," said Thomas E. Dewey, special prosecutor, in his speech for public co-operation in New York's racket investigation.

"There is," he went on, "certainly not a family in New York which does not pay its share of tribute to the underworld every day it lives and with every meal it eats. This huge unofficial sales tax is collected from the ultimate consumer in the price he pays for everything he buys. Every barrel of flour consumed in New York pays its toll to racketeers, which goes right into the price of every loaf of bread. Every chicken shipped into the City of New York pays its tribute into the poultry racket out of the pockets of the public. There are few vegetables or fish markets in the City of New York where merchants are not forced by sluggings, destruction of goods, threats and stink bombs to pay heavy toll."

Mr. Dewey has put his finger on the principal victim of New York's (and other cities') rackets—the ultimate consumer. If this warning awakens the ultimate consumer to the magnitude of the extortion and oppression to which he daily is subjected, Mr. Dewey ought to be assured of the public co-operation which he bespeaks.

London, England, Aug. 7.—The Anglo-French-Italian conference to be held in Paris next week to discuss the "East African" crisis will serve only to "mark time" until the League of Nations Council meets in September. It was admitted in high government quarters today. With an anxious eye on Premier Benito Mussolini's latest mobilization orders, government leaders regarded as extremely slight, the chances of success of the forthcoming parley. It was felt that nothing Britain or France could do or offer would avert the Italian move. Captain Anthony Eden, British minister for League of Nations affairs, will try to persuade Italy to limit her demands on Ethiopia to the economic sphere when he goes to Paris, it was learned, but there was little hope anything solely economic would deter Mussolini.

LAWRENCE CONQUERS BLANK ON TRENTON COURT

TRENTON, Aug. 7.—Playing carefully and smoothly Herb Lawrence, Bristol, conquered Frank Blank, last night. Lawrence took the first set after a terrific struggle, 8-6, and then went on to win the next in much easier fashion, 6-3.

Nelson Green, Bristol, also won over Earl Gerlach, senior of Lehigh University, 6-3, 6-2.

Steve Kramer, No. 4, was forced to his second three-set match in as many nights by the veteran Hobart Suppers. Suppers, who astonished the net followers by expunging Joe Waldron on Monday night, appeared well on his way to register another upset when his superior steadiness won for him the opening set, 7-5. Kramer, however, hit his stride in the next two sets and outlasted Suppers to win the second, 6-3, and the third, 6-2.

The title-defender, Bob Boyd, served notice that it will be a big job to keep him from his second consecutive championship when he won in handy fashion from Earl Ballard, 6-0, 6-3. Ballard had reached the quarter-finals with a convincing victory over the mite Abbie Rednor.

SEED PACKERS WIN FOURTH STRAIGHT GAME

Dave Landreth's Seed-Packers chalked up their fourth straight win and twelfth of the season Monday night as Danny Hines blanked the Vincentown team of the Burlington County League. Final score stood: Landreth's, 8; Vincentown, 0.

Hines, in white-washing the Jersey club, allowed but three singles and was given wonderful support by his mates. He never was in danger and only one Vincentown runner reached as far as third base. Two of the "across the river boys' hits were made by Sandy Powell.

The Bristolians had eleven safe smacks to their credit and featured by bunching their hits in the third and eighth to score seven of their eight runs. Heftman, Purcell and Snyder were the only Landrethmen not to connect safely. Gene Dugan played good ball all day for the victors.

Friday night, the Seed-Growers play Wissinoming on the latter's field and Sunday they will play on Leedom's field. Their opponent is not known at this time. Burlington A. A. having called off their scheduled game.

ALL BOUTS TO BE OKAYED BY THE M. A. A. UNION

With all bouts to be sanctioned by the Middle Atlantic Amateur Athletic Union, the second set of elimination bouts in the St. Ann's amateur boxing tournament will be fought Monday evening, August 12, at 7:30 o'clock. Ten boxing bouts are carded as well as two exhibitions of wrestling.

The St. Ann's Athletic Association recently joined the A. A. U. and all members of the boxing teams of Bristol must join the Union before they can participate in the events. The bouts for Monday night which will be announced later must be sanctioned by the commission. The referee for the bouts and judges as well as the timekeeper will be sent to Bristol by the A. A. U.

The winners of the last bouts will be matched with opponents from other cities according to the announcement made by Matchmaker, Sammy Moffo. Several new Bristol fighters will be seen in action as well as Johnny Dundee, Chet Castor, and Jupe Jeffries who scored decisive victories in their last appearance. "Jimmy" Lake, Third Ward, will attempt to bring the first win to that organization by taking over their opponent.

Medals will be awarded to the winners of the bouts with trophies going to the victorious clubs. The medals will be displayed at the store of Marty Green, Mill street, later in the week.

Sammy Moffo and Mickey Gordon who are trainers of the St. Ann's boxing team today announced that four Bristolians—Johnny Dundee, Chet Castor, Jupe Jeffries, and Teddie Tosti have entered the amateur boxing tournament in Pennsylvania, N. J., and will fight their first bouts next Friday night. They were scheduled for this week but had the fight postponed because of the St. Ann's postponement. They will fight under the colors of the St. Ann's organization.

THE SNOW LEOPARD

by Chris Hawthorne

CHAPTER XXV

Toole had the nervous organism of a mollusk, which is simply a way of saying that he had no such equipment at all. He absorbed suspense, irritation, disappointment and shock with an indifference that might be expected of an oyster under similar stress.

Bannister was not so happily immune. He could face a charging rhinoceros or teeter coolly on a breaking log jam without feeling a flick, but a haze of uncertainty affected him much the same way as a harbor fog gets on the nerves of an honest seaman.

The Thessalonians and the Albanians were now practically neck and neck, with three miles of seaway between them, the former having a meager advantage of "position" in relation to Alexandria.

Jeff Whipple was aboard the Thessalonians on his way to possible liberty at the same moment that Karen Sire would step ashore. What would happen then? The question rasped at Bannister's taut nerves like a notched stick across the strings of a bull fiddle.

Whipple would be in his own back yard at Alexandria. All the resources of a Levantine underworld nest would be ready for his beckoning finger. He was a swift and ruthless workman with the tools of murder. What might not happen if the Thessalonians discharged her passengers first?

Big ships always give each other plenty of leeway, particularly near a harbor. It would be necessary for the Albanian to establish a good lead on her rival to insure an earlier landing of passengers. Should the Albanian win, Toole and Bannister could meet Karen aboard the Thessalonians and keep her out of harm's way.

"Why are all these little craft buzzing around the Thessalonians?" Bannister asked, handing his glasses to Toole.

The detective gazed at what seemed to be a big mosquito fleet warning about the great vessel. "Reminds me of a big liner-coming up New York Bay with the Prince of Wales aboard," he said finally.

Whistles and bells from the little fleet piped and bled through the distance, mowed occasionally by the Thessalonians' moan. It might have been that she was protesting against the manœuvres of her venturesome little escorts; they seemed to be constantly cutting across her bow.

The Albanian, by this time, was close enough to her rival to enable the passengers to pick up details with their glasses. The small fleet surrounding the Thessalonians' dark bulk was composed of motorboats, sailing craft and a sprinkling of barges propelled by oars. All were gaily decorated and the decks showed hundreds of animated figures.

Bannister and Toole felt the spell of it. The detective pressed his derby down over his ears and his friend's powerful hands tightened on the rail. Yes, there was a sinister fascination about it all. When they next met Karen Sire—if, indeed, they ever met her again—in what environment would they find her? Would she be leading these poor, deluded wretches to a visionary kingdom in the hinterland of nowhere? Or would she be in Whipple's hands? And Brenda—what furies of jealousy might she release upon the girl?

But the Thessalonians seemed to be acting strangely. Bannister kept his glasses clamped. He kept the ship behaving like a baitball in the tall grass, fighting a fleet, he told Toole. "She's backing and snorting—listen to that!"

A roar that sounded like the concerted effort of every bull in North Africa came rumbling across the water. The Thessalonians had raised a voice of protest that was meant to be unmistakable.

A shout sounded from the Albanian's bridge, followed by the rush of feet along the deck. The first officer went porting past them. Bannister caught the few words they jerked over his shoulder:

"Wireless tells us that a parcel of fanatics has boarded the Thessalonians. They've overrun the ship! With that he puffed below."

Bannister made for the wireless room. He found Toole already there. A first officer was sending messages from the Thessalonians to the bridge of the Albanian, using a telephone. They could hear him distinctly:

"I slowed and stopped to avoid running the little fleet down. All seemed to be in holiday spirit. Biggest craft of the lot came alongside, others hugging close. Seaside at main deck open and they swarmed in on us, singing. About three hundred, all armed. Leader told me they had come to greet their new queen."

The officer set down the telephone and looked up. "What do you know about that?" he demanded dazedly. The Albanian churned and trembled. She was coming about and no doubt intended to head for the Thessalonians.

Again the officer picked up the phone. "An explosion!" he yelled suddenly, picking the words from the wireless speaker's mouth. A pause, then the officer continued to speed information to his chief on the bridge. "They've blown open the purser's safe. They must be pirates!"

Another wait—this time a long one. Presently the man at the telephone was speaking again: "They've taken off three passengers—Geoffrey Whipple, his valet, and Miss Karen Sire. They're aboard a fast powerboat now. Borders leaving ship. Crew has killed or wounded half a dozen."

The officer laid down the telephone. "First time anything like this happened since the war," he puffed. "How do they expect to get away with it? Every one of them will be mopped up as soon as they reach shore. This is a civilized country now."

The man's comments were lost upon Bannister and Toole. One sentence of the wireless message was burning in their brains—Whipple, his valet, and Karen had been taken off the Thessalonians by the pirates.

"It was a raid to rescue Whipple and his man," Toole managed to say, as they left the wireless room. "Karen has been kidnapped!" Bannister groaned.

"We've missed the big rook," said Toole. "Lord, how I'd like to have been there with a nightstick—three hundred heads to crack and nobody on the job to do it!"

The "One-Armed" wonder was sparring for wind—Dick knew that. Toole dared not speak of the fears that were gripping his heart. A little ray of hope came into the detective's eyes. "Everybody in Alexandria knows by this time what has been going on in the harbor," he soothed. "There's a good chance that the whole outfit will be nailed when they get ashore."

The first officer joined them. "Did you ever hear the like of that attack?" he asked. "Yet the Mediterranean has been breeding sea wolves for centuries. These inshore pirates have every trick of the game at their finger ends through natural impulse, tradition and practice. I watched the whole fleet as it sheered off from the Thessalonians. It was headed by a huge powerboat that seemed to be acting as a flagship. The big craft made directly for the fairway leading into eastern bay. I think the whole crew of 'em got away. The eastern bay is rocky, shipwreck and treacherous. Only small craft—none larger than that big powerboat—can run through the water warrens and over the mud flats. Capturing them right now seems impossible because they'll go ashore, scatter and make for the barrens. What a lovely time the Thessalonians officers will have explaining that raid! And the worst is yet to come for them."

"What could be worse?" Dick asked.

The first officer showed surprise. "Haven't you heard? Why the Thessalonians isn't going back to New York. She's under charter to take a colony of homecasters down through the Red Sea and over to an East Indian port. I hear they're going to make their way through a pass in the Himalayas to some place in Tibet."

"It can't be the outfit that swarmed over the Thessalonians," said Bannister.

"If they had the ship under charter, why should they have turned her over to that?" "Factional fight, maybe. Quarrel over leadership, religion, land grants, or just plain cussedness. Anyway, I'm glad to be out of it. I'd rather carry a hundred crates of live tigers, lions and gorillas than that bunch. They'll make a hell of a hole of any ship."

He waived away, grinning. "And the Thessalonians," said Bannister, turning to Toole, "do belong to Maurice Sire! Do you think it possible that Karen left the ship voluntarily with Whipple?"

"Why?" Toole snorted.

Bannister did not know why; it was one of those premonitions that had been familiar to him at intervals ever since he looked down at the body of the little brown man in the courtyard of the hotel. In the beginning of his wild pursuit he had regarded Karen merely as a bright leaf floating on the winds of chance, but this view had been altered. He saw her now as one inspired by an event, whose future, in her own mind, had been fatalistically predetermined. She had been gripped by the dazzling dream of a royal future. Was it not possible that she believed her destiny lay with Whipple? What part had the murdered Prince Juri Bai in it all?

For Bannister, time and the world had stopped. Karen Sire's fate had become a fixation. To reach her somehow—anyhow; to hold and shield her, to tear her away from the brink of some fearful danger—that thought alone was fixed in his head while everything else spun in meaningless nebulae about him. He was wildly impatient to get ashore—furiously impatient.

Bannister and Toole were preparing to quit the Albanian when they were informed that their presence would be required on board the Thessalonians, where an inquiry on the harbor raid was in progress. The summons suited them perfectly.

"This will give us a springboard for our next plunge," said Bannister hopefully.

"Into the air," Toole responded gloomily.

"Well, I'm a licensed flyer, and you've had some experience with planes. Let's go."

When Bannister and Toole boarded the Thessalonians they found that the vessel had virtually been taken over by British and native officials. Two of these functionaries were seated on one side of a table; across it were Captain Anderson and Clark supporting their chins with hands and elbows, both pictures of despair.

"This examination is informal," the British official explained. "We have just received verbal reports from the officers. Perhaps Captain Anderson and Mr. Clark will repeat what has gone before so that you may have a better understanding of what is required of you."

Anderson lifted his chin from his hands. He told how he had read of the murder of Prince Juri Bai in New York just before sailing time of the Thessalonians and of his surprise when Miss Sire came aboard with her official authority to leave, despite the fact that she was a material witness. He admitted that he had not attempted to communicate with Maurice Sire, explaining that he took Police Captain Boyle's word that her presence in New York would not be required.

"After we were well out to sea," he continued, "I was greatly disturbed by a message from Mr. Sire, instructing me to guard his daughter against any approach by Geoffrey Whipple, also a passenger. I knew Whipple. A few years ago he ran a big gambling house in Alexandria, and before then was known as an adventurer on a large scale, making political intrigue and government concessions his specialty. I saw to it that neither he nor his valet made contact with Miss Sire."

"Did she know of this?" Bannister asked.

"She did. The situation was made more difficult by her own efforts to talk with Whipple."

HULMEVILLE TOPPLED FROM FIRST POSITION

Hulmeville A. A. was finally toppled from first place in the Lower Bucks County League and its winning streak of seven consecutive games brought to an end last night as the Edgely Braves rallied in the fourth to score seven runs to trim the first half champions, 9-2, on the Edgely diamond.

After winning the first half, Hulmeville, for the greater part of the second led the pack and until last night held a one-half game lead. Now, as the result of their defeat, the Braves were dropped down to third place while the Hibernians and the Braves are in a dead heat for the sun-berth position.

Decisive base hits by Russ Malmesbury, Leo Hibbs, and Danny Hines gave the Hibernians the victory. Malmesbury doubled in the third to score two runs which tied the score. Leo Hibbs started the Edgelyites to their seven-run rally by socking a home run in the canal in left with a runner on base. The ball left Hibbs' bat like a shot out of a cannon and was lined into its watery grave. With three on later in the frame, Danny Hines hit a liner to right which got away from him for a triple to clear the bases. Before this Malmesbury had driven in two more runs with a timely single. Leo Hibbs ended the rally by lifting a high fly along the canal bank but Andy was playing deep and had no trouble catching the ball.

"Wils" Holland and "Pete" Devlin were the hurlers who felt the sting of the Braves' bats. Holland left the mound with one out in the seventh and Devlin failed in the role of a relief hurler. Both were pounded considerably.

"Jake" Paul was the winning moundman, holding the first half champions to five hits, three of which came in the first when a single by Carlen and doubles by Allison and Afflerbach scored two runs.

PITCHES FIRST NO-HIT GAME IN JUNIOR LEAGUE

Monday morning on Leedom's field, Billy Gallagher pitched the first no-hit game in the history of the Junior League, while his Catholic team mates handed out a terrific setback to the strong Pond A. C. nine, by the tune of 5 to 1. The Pond street boys acquired their only tally in the fourth frame on two errors. Billy had his opponents well in check throughout the contest, striking out ten, and allowing only four walks.

It was a seven-run rally in the fifth inning that gave the Boys' Club their victory and sent them into a tie for the first place position in the Junior League. During this inning, Rob Schemley had to be relieved by Spike Naylor on the mound. Schemley was touched for eight hits, while Naylor settled the Catholic Boys down and permitted them only one hit without a run.

HIBERNIANS JUMP INTO SECOND PLACE IN LEAGUE

Marty Fallon's Hibernians jumped into second place in the Bristol League chase last night by virtue of a 3-1 triumph over the Edgely A. C. on Leedom's field in a very fast game. The win broke a two game losing streak for the Hibeos.

The Edgelyites found the offerings of Dave Ennis entirely too difficult to solve and after scoring a tally in the second on consecutive bingles by Dick, Walterick and Wright, were blanked the remainder of the fray and held to a lone bingle, that a triple by Johnny Dick in the final session. Ennis fanned nine batters.

Seven hits were made by the winners off Mel Wright. Wright was tight on the pinches and did not allow the winners to cross the plate with the winning runs until the sixth although two doubles by Ennis and Dougherty tied the count in the third. The winning runs were counted as the result of hits by Clay and Brescia, a walk to Mulligan and sacrifice by DiTanna.

NO-NAMES MOVE INTO TIE FOR SECOND PLACE

The Harriman Nonames moved into a deadlock for second place in the Bristol Junior League by virtue of their 4-2 triumph over Third Ward. This was Harriman's second straight victory over the first half champs.

"Dickie" Van Aken went the route for the up-town boys and gave the Pikers eight well-scattered hits. Opposed to him was "Tucker" Muffett, who was touched for but a quartet of base hits. Poor support at untimely moments coupled with the Third Ward twirler's own wildness cost him the decision.

Harriman scored once in the first. Berry beat out a hit to the infield. He then stole second, and scored on "Weaser" McCahan's single to left center. The Pikers were held scoreless until the fourth. Then a pair of singles by VanZant and Moss scored the tying run.

In the Noname half of the fourth, with two out, Orr walked. Collier hit to Muffett who threw into right field, bringing the runners to second and third. Both runners scored on passed balls.

Harriman scored another in the fifth. Berry reached first via an error. Two outs brought him to second. Then Yule drove him across with a double. Third Ward counted one in the last frame on hits by Hughes and Grimes.

Harry Berry led the winners with two of their four bingles, while Irv Hetherington, Jess VanZant and Irv Moss all had a pair of base hits for the Pikers.

TULLYTOWN A. A. OUT OF SECOND-HALF RACE

Tullytown A. A. was eliminated from the second half race of the Bristol Twilight League last night as they suffered their third straight defeat. The Casey's were the victorious nine with the final tabulations: Casey's, 7; Tullytown, 3. It was the seventh straight win for the McDevittmen.

The firemen were held to two safe bingles by "Happy" Hovatter who would have had a shut-out had he and Cooper not erred in the last inning to give Tullytown two unearned tallies. The winners had eight hits off "Eddie" Green and Harry Sullivan and were led at the plate by Joe McDevitt who in three appearances made two doubles and a single. Paul Moore had a perfect average with a walk and two hits in three trips to the plate.

"Miss Bristol" En Route To Yellowstone Park

understand that she hoped she would have a good time. Next came a resident of North Radcliffe street, who extended best wishes; then a relative with the words "I'll say good-bye now, while you have time." From all wards of the borough, and from all walks of life the friends came, taking a few minutes off from busy routines to see "Miss Bristol" safely on her way.

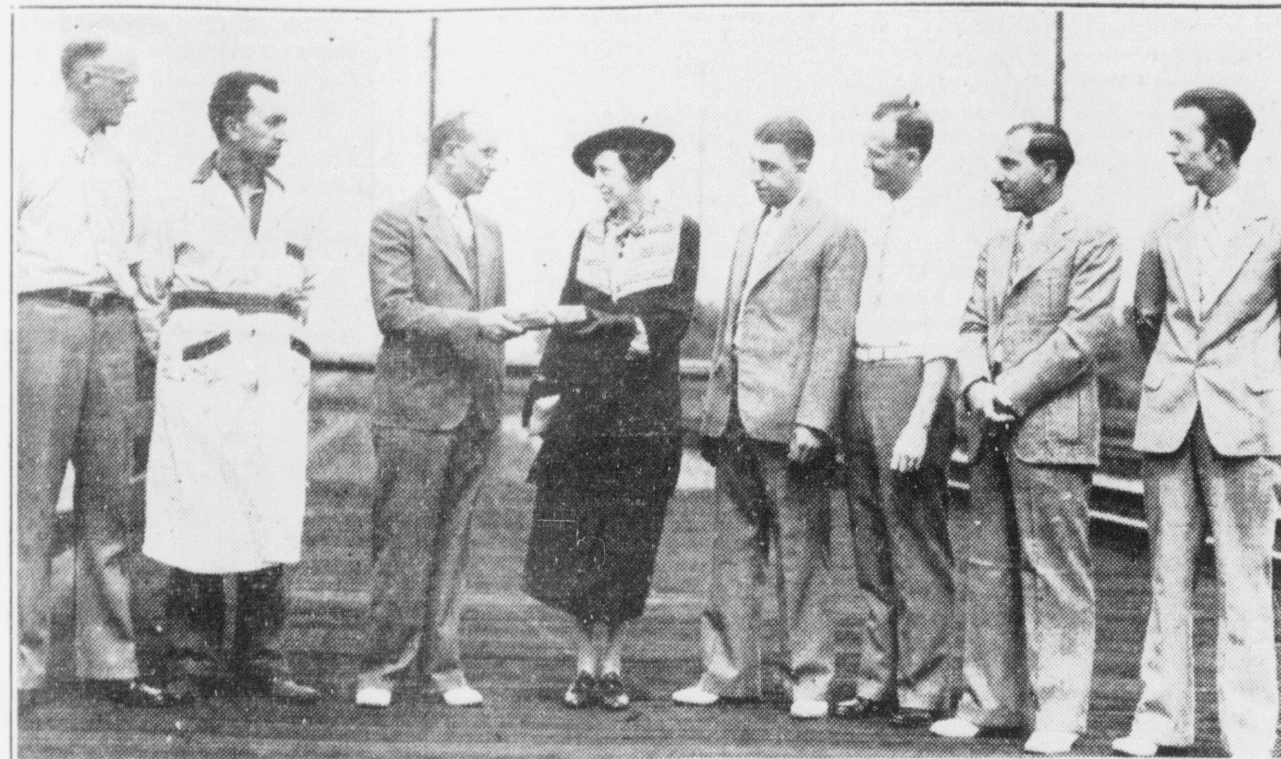

Men and women of all ages were in the crowd, as well as boys and girls of school age. One young man, hurrying from the gathering to Miss Muffett's side asked for her autograph. And as this scene was being enacted on the station platform, workers in a nearby mill left their looms, and eagerly watched.

Miss Muffett was not only thrilled, but looked forward expectantly to every part of the journey. "I want to see Chicago, too," she said, and her entire day, today, is to be spent in Chicago. This morning she had a sight-seeing trip throughout the "Windy City," with the escorts, and she acknowledged congratulations, and best wishes for a pleasant trip; and expressed appreciation to the merchants for their gifts, and to a relative who had also bestowed a present.

The merchants, who with The Courier sponsored the recent "Better Times" contest, of which Miss Muffett was the winner, are: Barton & Torano, Marty Green, Smith's Model Shop, Vandegrift's Men's Shop, R. C. Weik, Artesian Products Co., Fandozzi's Electric Service Station, George J. Irwin, United Cut-Rate Drug Store, Woler's Paint and Wallpaper Store, Abe Popkin, Spencer & Sons, F. E.
